1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over either US 5,647,921 to Odagawa et al. or US 4,768,458 to Arakawa et al. and further in view of US 5,384,203 to Apfel.

Each of the prior art references substantially shows the invention as claimed except that they do not shows to obtain the viscosity of the bulk solidifying amorphous in the regime of about 0.1 to 10,000 poise and to foam the molten amorphous alloy prior to casting. However, since the puddle of the bulk solidifying amorphous alloy on the chill surface must be in a stable condition (see col. 4, lines 17-21 of US 4,791,979 to Liebermann), it would have been obvious to obtain an appropriate viscosity of the casting alloy through a routine experimentation such that the injected melt will form a stable puddle. Further, Apfel shows to obtain the foamed amorphous article by first foaming the molten amorphous alloy before casting. Thus, it would have been obvious to foam the molten amorphous alloy of the primary reference prior to casting if a foamed product is designated. With respect to claims 5, 6, 9, 10, 12, 13, 20, and 23, it would have been obvious to obtain these process parameters through a routine experimentation for a specific alloy product to be cast. With respect to claim

14, that alloy composition is deemed to be conventional (see, for example, US

4,148,669 to Tanner et al.)

3. It is noted that this application and 10/552,667 are represented by the same law firm. The invention of the instant application is substantially the same as that of 10/552,667 except the additional foaming step. However, the foaming step is deemed to be conventional. It is also noted that both application have a same priority date and have different inventorship.

4. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Kuang Y. Lin whose telephone number is 571-272-1179. The examiner can normally be reached on Monday-Friday, 10:00-6:30.
